MOSCOW

T. M. WRIGHT
PROPRIETOR

Moscow, Idaho

We came from Moscow down through the Nez Perce Indian Country to Boise. Have you seen the Nez Perce Country? You should some time. I believe it has more of grandeur than the Grand Canyon area. We drove past the scene of the battles of 1877, up Salmon River Canyon (5500 feet deep). They refer to it as "The River of no return."

We had ground blizzards and deep snow all of yesterday, in Wyoming; but it is lovely here. With really colored trees, Sumac and Cottonwood especially. I can't wait to get to Kansas and see the jackoak.

I just might not get back for the second class; but I expect Mary will take care of it. I will write her as soon as I know. We may have to go back to Salt Lake before Los Angeles. And, definitely, Arkansas has become a must. I hope you didn't find your new group too formidable.

Did you know the author of "Jubal Troop" was a Kansan?

And have you seen, "Willa Cather on Writing"? It's a thoroughly good book. Makes me feel quite happy and determined to do better.

If you have your baby and everything gets simmered down and you have a minute you might call Velma Cope or one of the Long boys at the foundry and ask them to pass along the news to us. Earle talks with them every day or so; and we would be so pleased to know about it.

Hope you have a roof over your heads. And that Rosa is fine, one way or another.

Affectionately,

Hazel H.
