

Dear Rosa: Also Murray:

I like my candelabrum very, very much . The color and the shape, and most especially (besides the non-inflammability) the weight , which prevents it wobbling and warping the way most of them do. And such a beautiful package. Thanks much.

I would like one more thing. Do you have a snapshot of Lane, that you can spare? I think I would prefer one without a bonnet, I like her head.

The cider, which should no doubt have been boiled, was much better in the beginning. From its conduct yesterday during the journey over to Mary's, I think I had better hasten to say that I disclaim all responsibility . I wouldn't recommend giving Lane any.

Are you out of apples?

If you would prefer to make it more of a challenge, I have "Emily Will Know" translated into French. They left me out of it. Nancy asked me if they should have said "Pour Hazel". Was she trying to insult me? It is to be translated into Spanish and she insists that I be included.

Thanks, again, for knowing what I would like and seeing that it was left on my doorstep.

Happy New Year to you all!

Hazel M.H.

P.S. I received "Of Men and Mountains" for Christmas (William O. Douglas). It has some more nice Indian legend.
