

1977-78

Harold + Carol

No listing under that name - obviously they're nervous; or somebody else's "with somebody else."

Love you both; remember, in that number in Cambridge, 19

10/6/77

Otherwise, we're fine. The weather is superb (between rains), the mushrooms are emerging, vine maple is striking, and the new ferry is never more than an hour late.

We have had another application for a re-zone... the same nine acres Heritage Properties appealed about in June. There is to be a hearing next week before the Pierce County Planners. As much as we hate to get into this again, we may have to start another fight. As Clay Huntington said to me last week when I asked him about this, "They never give up." I hasten to say that I do not trust Clay or feel that he is really on the side of right.

The real reason... the Spencer-Brown Publishing company is still in business at Cambridge? He's the guy I went in to see at Lakewood a couple of years ago, in 1975 I think, October. I gave him my revised collection of Picket Rock stories, at his request, and have heard nothing since. I wrote him an air letter three or four months ago but had no reply. The address he gave me was Spencer-Brown and Co. Ltd., 17 Halifax Road, Cambridge. His telephone No. was 0223-66861. Don't go to any trouble, of course. But I thought maybe you might look up the company in a library in London or something and find out whether it is still in business or listed. I have copies of the stories of course. Many of them are stories you have not read, but most have some merit I think. The characters crisscross as they did in the original collection. I repeat. Don't go to any trouble on this or take up your valuable time. I just thought it might come handy.

Handwritten notes in cursive script, including the name "Miss [unclear]" and other illegible text.

Additional handwritten notes and possibly a faint typed header, including the word "RECEIVED" and other illegible text.

Additional message area

3 See the last

2 Second fold